Woman Lost Chatelaine Watch and Captain Kruger His Chatelaine Badge-Convivial Veterans.

The police department has been praised generally for its handling of the big crowds last week. Mayor Bookwalter personally thanked the force and the Board of Public Safety and several business men sent complimentary letters. No one was injured and nothing was stolen. A young man tore off his badge on Thursday afternoon because the captain kept him from climbing over a curb rope. The badge was found in the gutter, but the young man escaped. Some of the veterans, unwisely enthusiastic over the dedication and renewing acquaintances with their comrades of the war, drank more than they could properly carry. Some of them had money in their pockets and when a policeman found a soldier in this condition he was taken to the police station for the safe preservation of his comfort and funds. Mr. Schweikle said he had just drawn the money from the bank and was on his way to his factory to pay the employes. He visited two or three saloons, and when he reached the door of the factory he felt in his rear pocket for the wallet containing the money, but it was missing. He did not know where he At Schaub's saloon he purchased a glass of beer. After leaving this place he felt for his wallet and it was safe. He then got into his buggy and rode to his factory. When he discovered his loss he ran back on Market street in search of the money. At the corner of Market and Alabama streets he was struck by a runaway wagon and knocked to the pavement. Mr. Schweikle was stunned by the fall. He was picked up and carried to the curb. He was bleeding from a big gash in the back of the head, and the City Dispensary ambulance was called. Dr. Goodwin dressed Mr. Schweikle's wound. He at first protested against being treated by the doctor, but when the latter told him that prompt attention was necessary he allowed the work to proceed.

In talking of his loss Mr. Schweikle at added a little more and said it was $125. He was of opinion that some one saw him 627 East Vermont street.

NO OFFICER HAS SEEN ANY DRUNK. ENNESS OR SERIOUS DISORDER.

Of the Six Men Who Have Been in the Hospital None Has Been Very Ill-Three Sent Home.

Everything is in tip-top shape at the National Guard camp of instruction at the fair grounds. The boys are enthusiastic over the work that they have done. They have been so busy that they have had no time for JAMES LEHR, ALIAS "HARRY LEWmischief. The discipline of the camp is extraordinary. One of the best signs of a well-behaved camp is the absence of drunkenness. There is not an officer that can say that he saw a drunken soldier last week. The boys are having a good time. Some have expressed regret that the end is so near. The more enthusiastic ones say they intend to join the regulars so they can be surrounded with the military atmosphere at all times. The following changes in the camp routine for to-day were sent out yesterday from headquarters:

Governor's review at 3:45 p. m. in the following order, starting from the right: Signal corps, Third Infantry, Second Infantry, First Infantry, artillery battalion, hospital corps and the ambulance corps. There will only be left in camp enough guards during the review to protect the property. The troops will be paraded in the regulation blue blouses and white gloves. As soon as the color call is sounded at 3:45 p. m. the soldiers will be expected to be ready to march to the field for the review, which will take place as near 4 o'clock as possible. As a rule a review lasts for nearly an hour. The troops will face the south, so that an excellent view can be had by the spectators from the grand stand. Governor Durbin was at the camp all of formerly, but this was denied by the Governor, who said there were more. There are 1,900 men in camp this year, while there were only 1,600 last year. There are two more companies in camp this year than heretofore. The Governor and his staff will view the troops from the field to-day. Attention Called to Conditions in the State Institutions.

The twelfth report of the Board of State Charities of Indiana has been made to the Governor by the secretary of the board-Amos W. Butler. The report does not refer to the Michigan City investigation, as this matter will be covered in a separate report which it is expected will be made some time next week. The report shows that during the year ending Nov. 1, 1901, 28,014 men and women lived in the jails of Indiana. This is an increase of 550 over the preceding year. He Is the Young Man Who Figured in a Cutting Affray Three Weeks Ago.

In the arrest of James Lehr, alias "Harry Lewis," yesterday by Detectives Colbert and Hauser another chapter was added to the cutting affray that took place in front was supposed at the time that it was done by a woman. Two women in company with When the case was aired in court Harry Lewis came to the police station and said that neither of the girls did the cutting; that he alone was responsible for the trouble. It is the supposition of the police that Lewis incriminated himself to shield one of the women. The case hung fire in Police Court for several days and Judge Stubbs found the case so complicated that he threw it out of court. Yesterday morning Lindley Jones, State agent for the Jeffersonville Reformatory, walked into the office of Captain of Detectives Gerber and placed a small picture on the desk and asked that the man be arrested. In the room at the time were Detectives Colbert and Hauser. They examined the picture closely and Colbert turned to Captain Gerber and said: "This looks like young Lewis who was acquitted in Police Court last week." Captain Gerber yesterday. He was brought to the police station and questioned as to his identity by Captain Gerber. He at first declared that his name was Lewis. Captain Gerber then took up the small photograph and placed it before Lehr's face. The latter almost jumped from his chair in surprise. After he recovered the expression on his face changed to one of chagrin. He placed his folded arms on the desk and said in broken tones: 'You won't send me back to that place, will Before Captain Gerber could answer Lehr

When Jones came upstairs to take Lehr back to | 21. This will be Mrs. Sewall's last formal Jeffersonville there was a pathetic scene in the turnkey's office. The old mother turned her back and walked to the window with tears streaming down her cheeks. The two sisters clung to young Lehr as he was led through the door. Jones at that time was putting on a pair of handcuffs. The larger of the sisters put her arms around Lehr's neck and begged that he not be taken from her. Lehr, who had remained calm during this time, burst into tears as he saw his mother standing before the barred window crying. Jones hurried with Lehr through the halls of the police station, out into the street on the way to the Union Station. Lehr was sent from Clay county to the Jeffersonville Reformatory four years ago on the charge of burglary. He was paroled

An echo of the Rockwood strike was heard last night at the corner of Union and Morris streets, when Charles Clark, one of the molders imported from Cincinnati, was beaten about the head and face by unknown persons. His injuries consisted of six long gashes on different parts of the head and several painful injuries on the chest and hands. The latter injuries were received by Clark as he threw up his hands to protect his head and face.

Clark, who rooms at 33 West Vermont street, was visiting some relatives on Union street last night. He left the house about 11 o'clock and went to the corner of Union and Morris streets to catch a car down town. He had hardly been there a minute when he was stunned by a blow on the head. This was followed by many other blows. Clark ran into John Ohleyer's yard to save himself, but he was pursued by his two assailants. Clark yelled "Murder!"

They rained blow after blow on his head All the time the men were beating Clark he kept yelling "Murder!" Albert Bowman, who lives near the corner, was coming from Meridian street when he heard the cries of Clark. As Bowman approached he saw two men running toward Mulberry street. Bowman ran to Ohleyer's yard, where he found Clark. The latter was covered with blood. Clark told Bowman that he had been assaulted by the two men who had just left. Bowman ran after the een and followed them down Mulberry street for a block and a half. By this time the neighbors had become aroused.
